Architecture in Turkey in the Last 100 Years

In 1920s the ideology of Turkism dominated the large-scale and monumental structures built in the Western understanding. Ottoman and Seljuk ornamental elements were interpreted and used according to their time, and traditional flavors were interpreted with modern ones. Now the architecture has turned into facade decoration and the architects have shown themselves on the facade.

The settlements in Anatolia are shaped depending on the traditions, regional data, application principles and conditions. The influence of the life and social structure of the
